

ECO 101 : Microeconomics

This course introduces students to the key principles of microeconomics and its application to decisions made by households and firms. Uses the forces of supply and demand, the course studies the interaction between individuals, business firms, and government. It analyses the impact of perfect and imperfect competition on the welfare of key players in society.

Credits 3

Core Requirement

BCC