

ANT 101 : Introduction to Sociocultural Anthropology

The course explores anthropology and its four major sub-branches. It focuses on the significance of sociocultural anthropology for appreciating the diversity of contemporary and past human cultures, and creating an awareness of ethnographic research methods and diverse anthropological perspectives. It enhances students' understanding of the similarities and differences among human cultures and their appreciation of cultural constructions of realities.

Credits

3

Prerequisites

None